BIODEGRADABLE PENS

SOMETIMES SUSTAINABILITY STARTS WITH THE SMALLEST THING!

The humble pen that everybody still uses is traditionally made out of petroleum-based plastic. Not surprisingly, it doesn't degrade.

However, the pens featured here - Verne (Frost), Irving (Frost) and Bronte - are biodegradable, making them very environmentally friendly. The resin used is a natural material, PLA (Polylactic Acid), and is 100% derived from renewable vegetable resources instead of oil.

These retractable ballpens are supplied with Dokumental ISO 12757-2 black ink refills as standard.

A RANGE OF OPTIONS...

The pens all come with a clear frosted barrel and coloured clip. Irving and Verne pens are available with a solid white barrel on orders over 1000 units.

Up to 4 spot colours can be printed on the barrel. Optional printing on the clip of the Verne pen is available too.

BIODEGRADABLE AND COMPOSTABLE PENS MADE OF 100% PLA

The Verne, Irving and Bronte ballpens are manufactured with a revolutionary material called PLA (Polylactic Acid). It's derived from 100% renewable natural fibres and not from petroleum, so it has far less environmental impact. The characteristics of these pens are otherwise every bit the equal to those manufactured with petroleum-derived materials.

Additionally, the resin used in these pens is biocompostable, so after undergoing an industrial composting process it breaks down in nature, partially reducing CO2 emissions in the atmosphere. The low environmental impact from this NatureWorks PLA resin is documented by results of specific analyses carried out by the German DIN CERTCO laboratory.
